3. Salience Maps

DISCLAIMER: The stories listed for each point are either exhaustive or sampled randomly. All saliency maps are based on the loss calculated in the binary test setup. The tokens marked red indicate the true class, the tokens marked blue indicate the false class.

3.1. Inducing Noise

Each randomly sampled story shows the saliencies assigned to it by BERT, ROC model, CLOZE model, and MIXED model. For each model, two stories are shown: The first is the default story, the second one the story induced with noise.

3.2. Trigger Words

In the following document, saliency mappings of tokens for one sentence for each trigger word is shown. For each trained model, the mapping for each trigger word is done for the original sentence (with triggers), the sentence with triggers removed and the sentence with triggers changed to a synonym (triggers synonymized). Additionally, the actual label (label) and the label predicted by the model (prediction) is shown. The labelling for Huggingface transformers is used. As a result, “0” means the ending is true and “1” means the ending is false.
